Brazos Christian School Secures $13.4 Million Tax-Exempt Refunding

Bryan, Texas (March 2026) – Brazos Christian School recently partnered with Government Capital to refinance a taxable loan initially issued for the construction of a new fine arts building, sports complex, and campus expansion project. The school's utilization of the tax-exempt conduit financing method tailored specifically for 501(c)(3) organizations significantly reduced borrowing costs, resulting in interest cost savings of over $2 million.

Government Capital Corporation based in Southlake, Texas, provided the required conduit infrastructure and industry expertise which allowed the school to access tax-exempt lending options. Additionally, Government Capital assisted the school in analyzing the current market conditions and structuring the conduit financing with optimal financial terms.

"We are grateful to Government Capital for introducing our school to the conduit financing method and working closely with us to develop the best financing model to fit our institution and our goals," the Brazos Christian School leadership shared.

"I'd like to congratulate the Brazos Christian School board on a successful closing," Zac Saldi, Vice President at Governmental Capital Corporation, stated. "We take great pride in supporting private and parochial schools across Texas by providing financial solutions which help them advance their mission and long-term objectives."
